The main objective of this monograph is to determine on the basis of the survey the role of controllers in contemporary Polish companies. The study confirmed that some of the tasks performed by contemporary controllers in Polish companies are the same as those performed by their counterparts around the world although some differences were also identified. Comparing the current role of controllers in Polish organizations with their role in foreign companies can contribute to improving the controller's image in the organizations, and change the attitude of other employees to management accountants. This may lead to better cooperation between individual departments and controllers, and therefore to the more efficient functioning of the company.
